Call for chairpersons and members for the Staffing Review and Appeals committees

Government of Nunavut

The Staffing Review and Appeals committees have openings for chairpersons and members.

Staffing Review and Appeals committees provide unsuccessful candidates with an opportunity to appeal, if they feel an error in process has occurred that may have affected their appointment to a position.

The committees for the review of unionized positions have three members: the deputy minister of Finance; the president of the Nunavut Employees Union (NEU), or their delegate, and the chairperson. The committees for the review of excluded positions also have three members: the deputy minister of Finance, or his/her delegate, a person selected by the minister from a list of qualified persons, and the chairperson. The chairperson facilitates meetings and prepares reports summarizing committee decisions. Chairpersons and members will be chosen from across Nunavut to participate in committee meetings in the Kitikmeot, Kivalliq and Qikiqtaaluk regions, and in Iqaluit.

Chairpersons and members must be residents of Nunavut, have experience resolving human resources issues and not be a current employee of the Government of Nunavut or the Nunavut Employees Union.

They must be available for at least six hours per month to deal with committee matters. Training will be provided and all members will be paid for their services.

Those interested should submit a letter and resumé, highlighting their relevant experience, along with the names and contact numbers of three references to:

Associate Deputy Minister of Human Resources
Department of Finance
